

Packet

A packet is a portion of data that transmitted between a source and destination in a network. It normally a smaller part of some larger unit of data, which is tagged with an identification number and an address. When all packets for a specific data unit arrives at their destination, they are reassembled to form the original data.

Division into packets, transmission and reassembly is governed by a transmission protocol.

From:

<http://docs.intenogroup.com/glossary/> - Inteno Glossary

Permanent link:

<http://docs.intenogroup.com/glossary/p/packet>

Last update: 2018/08/10 18:16

